This weekend starts the summer time stuff. BB Q's, fishing, vacations, schools out...all the good stuff. Life is good and living will be easy.

It is also a great time to start thinking about those projects you have been mulling over. Construction costs are pretty stable right now and will probably stay that way for the next month or two. The big unknown is gas prices. The higher they go up, the more it costs to take a vacation, deliver labor or materials to a plant for processing or to a project.

The good news though are the stable prices and interest rates.

At

Renovations we are seeing a slight decline in pricing to us . Below is a project we are completing that will be done on time and UNDER budget!

Enjoy the weekend and give us a call with a question or if we can help.
